About Ohyama Kaido

The Ohyama-kaido is the road from Akasaka Gomon in Edo to Ohyama (Isehara City, Kanagawa Prefecture). where Ohyama Afuri Shrine is famous for praying for rain. It has been actively used as a road for "Ohyama Michi" which became a popular boom in the middle of the Edo period, and has become famous as "Ohyama-kaido" since around this time.

There was a custom of paying swords at the time of visiting, and there seemed to be something longer than the person's back. In the late Edo period, merchants flourished as an important transport route for transporting various supplies such as Suruga tea and Hadano tobacco.

Ohyama-kaido is a historical road where many people and goods come and go and various exchanges have been created.
